Not illustrated. 1883 Excerpt: .was forty, to learn to read, just to read the word of God. She toiled away most patiently, spelling out chapter after chapter, when even her own children at times laughed amiably at the endeavor, as if it were a hopeless one. In time she committed to memory two or three entire chapters of John s Gospel, and some of the most precious promises, which she took great comfort in repeating during her last illness, after she became too weak for the effort of reading. She was received into the church about the time she began to learn to read; and though disease soon began to undermine her constitution, and her years of service for the Master were soon numbered, they were years of decided growth and of fidelity in standing up for Jesus as she had opportunity. In spite of the cough that attends consumption,...
